

48 NEW YORK PUPILS REACH NORRIS DAM

Lincoln High School Party, With 12 Teachers, Will Study Re- gional Planning of TVA

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORRIS, Tenn., Jan. 29.—A New York group of forty-eight pupils and twelve teachers of Lincoln High School, Teachers College, Columbia University, headed by G. D. Baker, principal, arrived here tonight for a study of regional planning as carried out by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Many of the visitors danced with Norris folk at the President's birthday ball, which had special significance in this New Deal-constructed town.

Leaving Roanoke, Va., early this morning, the party inspected the rayon plant of the American Bernberg Corporation at Elizabethton, Tenn., and proceeded here on buses from Knoxville.

After church services tomorrow, TVA officials will escort the party around the town, saving until Monday the inspection of the Norris Dam and power house.

The visitors, who are quartered in the old construction camp used by builders of the dam, will depart Wednesday, going to a regional planning project at Clarksville, Ga., and later to one in South Carolina.
